A site for witch burning during the 17th century, where the last ever witch trial in Sweden took place 1668. A woman, called Stor Märit, accused of having been to Blåkulla, the home of all witches and having been in liaison with the devil, was burnt at the stake on Spångmyrholmen. The site is close to the village, approx. 1.5 km walking distance from the nearest road.

Lillhärdal 17 september 2005

På stenen finns texten

"Till minne av Stor Märit från Lillhärdal och de svenska kvinnor som på grund av falska vittnesmål och vidskepelse avrättades och brändes på bål under häxprocesserna i Sverige år 1668-1676."

On the stone is the inscription

"In memory of Stor Märit of Lillhärdal and the Swedish women who because of false testimony and superstition were executed and burned at the stake during the witch trials in Sweden in 1668-1676. Lillhärdal 17/9 2005"

"Zum Gedenken an Stor-Märit aus Lillhärdal und die schwedischen Frauen, die in Schweden während der Hexenprozesse 1668-1676 aufgrund falscher Zeugenaussagen und Aberglaubens hingerichtet und auf dem Scheiterhaufen verbrannt wurden. Lillhärdal 17. September 2005"
